Difference Between Paralympics and Special Olympics

Paralympics and Special Olympics have different Categories, Training Criteria, and Philosophies.

ATHLETES

Paralympics: mostly physical disabilities although intellectual and visual disabilities are included. No age limit however, Paralympians are between 18- 30 years of age. The level of competition is elite there are divisions but when junior athletes move to actual Paralympics competition there is no age division.

Special Olympics: Athletes must have intellectual or developmental delays minimum age is 8 yrs old. Majority of participants are children.

TRAINING

For Paralympic athletes it is essentially the same training regimen as an Olympic athlete year-round intense specialized training in a specific sport with own training facilities train along side traditional Olympics athletes.

Colorado Springs Olympic training center. Has both traditional and Paralympic athletes living and training in their resident halls.

Special Olympics one season practicing a sport, practice 1-2 times a week then compete. The next season may practice another sport and compete.

Criteria & Philosophy under which athletes participate

Paralympics: athletes are welcomed to train. but the emphasis is on elite-level competition. Each sport has its own criteria and standards, so to compete, an athlete must be one of the best based on her or his performance. but the emphasis is on elite-level competition.

Special Olympics: Special Olympics believes in using athletics as an avenue to reach an individual's maximum potential. No one is excluded or left out based on their skill. Selection such as state and national level competition may occur through a lottery type system.
